

ST269 Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders Prevention in Aboriginal communities

FREE one day training

Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder (FASD) is a sensitive and complex issue. This workshop offers training on working with Aboriginal women of child bearing age in conjunction with FASD awareness and prevention resources. Culturally secure strategies for reducing alcohol-related harm during pregnancy will be a central focus.

Target audience

Community service providers from all sectors who work with Aboriginal women, their families and communities are invited to register. Training content is endorsed by the Australian College of Nursing (ACN) according to approved criteria. Attendance attracts six ACN points.

Tuesday 22nd August, 2017

9am - 4:30pm

Mental Health Commission (MHC)

Level 1/1 Nash Street Perth WA 6004

To register for this event (ST269) go to our new online system:

www.mhc.wa.gov.au

(Please note: the web page may take a little while to load)

We welcome queries - please contact us on e: AOD.training@mhc.wa.gov.au or p: (08) 6553 0560.

The MHC also offers a range of training events focussing on alcohol and other drug use - register via the above link.